I owe you an apology!

Hi there ,

I feel compelled to start off with an apology.

I worked hard and created free gift(s) for you and then I dropped the ball. With things to do in re-developing my business, admin stuff and working with new clients, I let my emails slide. Terrible excuse, and I am embarrassed!

So I'm starting over. Actually, I should say that I am starting right here. New beginnings.

First, I want to make sure you did indeed receive the free gift you originally signed up for. If not, you can download a new copy.

You will also find something extra there. An extra gift to go along with my apology, so please do check it out by clicking on the button below!

I am also making a promise to you. Now that I've figured out how Mailerlite works (for the most part), I intend to make good use of it so I can stay in touch with you on a regular basis.

I plan to knock on your email door every couple of weeks, except for a fun challenge or two that I think you might enjoy, or if something extra special is happening... just to say hi and check in or to let you know when I've posted a new blog, which is something else I'm committing to.

I do hope that you will forgive me and stay on the list.

Warmest regards,
Jen
